NEW THORHILD MOTORS' GARAGE TO BE OPENED BY JULY 1st

THORHILD — George Tomnuk announced in Thorhild this week that his new Thorhild Motors' garage will be opened for business on or before July 1. Work is going ahead as rapidly as possible on the new building to replace the one destroyed by fire last Jan. 14.

The repair shop, under the management of Harry Sawchuk, is at present located in Bawol's Garage. Good Horse Trading

Some of the old-time ability of the horse-trader was evident in the deal made by Minister of Agriculture James Gardiner to sell Canada's surplus beef to Britain. Since the foot-and-mouth disease outbreak in Saskatchewan, shipments of Canadian meat have been banned to the United States. There is no ban on shipments to Britain, however, and there is no ban on importation of New Zealand meat to the United States.

This is a three-way deal whereby the United States will buy the New Zealand production and we will fill in the gap in the sister-dominion's trade with the Mother Country.

We have another solution for this problem, which is only temporary, of disposing of our surplus meat until the U.S. market is opened up again. Last year, due to high revenues and the inability of defence industries to supply all the armaments Canada ordered, we had a large defence surplus. Why not take a hundred million dollars and buy up surplus Canadian beef and pork for shipments to Greece, South Korea, and Britain (where the current meat ration is very low)?

The good-will engendered might go further towards a solution of world problems than would the purchase of an equivalent amount of guns and ammunition.

Farming By Plane

Farming on the United States larger farms is being increasingly conducted from airplanes, according to science sources. Aircraft are being used to seed large pasture areas, rice fields and other cropland. Planes are also used to spray early growth to protect it from destructive insects and diseases.

Aerial farming is now a big business in the United States, coming into use in other areas of the world. It is estimated that some 5,000 airplanes are now used in aerial farming and that many millions of acres of land are treated by airplane annually.

One of the stimulants in the aerial farming industry has been the decrease in available farm labor. In rough and wet areas, where ground operations are difficult, aerial seeding has been particularly successful. During the winter of 1948, large areas of forests, which had been burned over the preceding fall, were re-seeded from the air. White pine seed was mixed with sawdust and the operation was carried out while snow was still on the ground.

According to the Forest Service, germination was satisfactory and these white pines are now four years old. Other programs have been carried out in different regions. In the Northeastern States, during the summer of 1949, millions of acres of forests were sprayed in an effort to eliminate the destructive gypsy moth. The effectiveness of this method is the best hope for practical control of several such pests, according to entomologists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Thus the age of mechanical farming has now passed into the air age, which gives American farmers a new outlook on old farming problems.

Farm Population Down

Canada's farm population has declined by about 320,000 in the past 10 years, according to a report just issued by the dominion bureau of statistics following the decennial census they conducted last June. In contrast, the total population of Canada increased about 2½ million. Last June farm population numbered 2,827,732, while Canada's population totalled 14,009,429.

All provinces but British Columbia recorded a decline in farm population. The proportion of Canada's population residing on farms was 20 per cent last June, as compared to 27 per cent in 1941.

Help For the Hungry

Extracts from address by Hon. L. B. Pearson, secretary of state for external affairs, before the annual congress of the Co-operative Union of Canada:

"When we in the west speak of improving economic and social conditions in our own countries, we think in terms of raising our standards of living. The basic problem of most of the peoples of Asia, however, does not concern the standard of living, but how to maintain life itself. Never have so many subsisted on so little. Nearly a thousand million Asians are trying to exist on a diet amounting to only 80% of the pre-war level—the level of the 'hungry East.' The daily ration in rice in some urban areas has shrunk to 5 or 6 ounces per person as compared with the normal pre-war daily consumption of 16 to 18 ounces. Since 1945 India's food production has deteriorated. In spite of 165 million people being engaged in agriculture on 170 million acres of land devoted to food crops, the people are living from 'ship to mouth'."

"I think it is true to say that the whole concept of economic and technical aid to under-developed countries and of our participation in these programmes of technical assistance would have been inconceivable as recently as in the 1930's. I think we would have decided then that for economic and practical reasons such schemes were impossible. In participating in these programmes, we have embarked upon an experiment in international relations motivated by political and moral considerations which are both new and demanding."

"The present modest rate and scale of these programmes is determined not only by our ability to make the assistance available, but also by the ability of receiving countries to absorb it and put it to best use. Our assistance must be clearly and closely related to the local needs as the local authorities see them. We can and should assist those countries in assessing their requirements and in formulating them, but the judgment as to how those requirements can best be met must be their own."

"Our participation in these programmes of technical assistance offers us a two-way bridge of co-operation with the countries of Asia. That is why it is of such vital importance that they should succeed."

It's a Long, Long Road

(From the Nanton News)

It's fashionable to sniff as soon as a new municipal councillor is elected. "The first thing he'll do is build himself a road." The implication is that a councillor has no business seeing to it that his district gets a new road or gravel laid down or improvements of any kind, especially if they should happen to be in his immediate neighborhood.

The sniffers are totally wrong, of course. We thing a councillor should promptly go to work at once to secure all the benefits he can for his area. It may provoke people in another area; it may make them grumble; and best of all it may make them get cracking and take some interest in the affairs of the municipality. They may even get out and promote someone for the councillor's job. They may be irked enough to read their municipal financial reports. They might even get out to vote when the matter of new councillors come up.

We are promoting councillors who are not so pusillanimous as to put off building roads for their convenience. They are going to get a lot of abuse so they might just as well get themselves elected and get improvements for their part of the community.

Note and Comment

The effort to secure selfish advantages explains much of what is termed "politics".

The "more pay for less work" idea has a counterpart in "more profits for less goods."

ALMOST EVERY WAR CAN BE AVOIDED

By B. H. LIDDELL HART, London, England
From "The Listener", Weekly Magazine of the British Broadcasting Corporation

My vocation has been the study of war—the exploration of its causes, conditions, course, and effects. In studying the way that wars break out, I came to see that the best hope of its prevention lies in a well-judged avoidance of the things that always tend to produce a catastrophe. In a sense, this is a negative solution—but it is a negative that paves the way for the positive. It keeps clear of the accident—causes that are apt to be fatal, and keeps the road open for eventual progress towards a better situation. Statesmen need to realize the psychological effect of getting an opponent in a corner.

The study of war has taught me that almost every war was avoidable, and that the outbreak was most often produced by statesmen losing their heads, or their patience, and putting their opponent in a position where he could not draw back without serious loss of "face". Clumsy efforts to forestall a feared aggression have too often provoked it—particularly where politically-inspired moves have jumped beyond strategic possibilities.

We must try to understand Communist-Russian mentality—not only its Marxist logic, missionary fervor, and urge for expansion of power, but its underlying fears, intense suspiciousness, and strange ignorance: all accentuated by prolonged isolation and the nature of its system. It may be difficult to fathom that mentality, but we can at least put ourselves on "the other side of the hill" and try to look at things as we should see them from that angle. It would help us to understand, for example, what the Russians may feel about American military activities in Persia, close to their vital sources of oil supply in the Caucasus, or about efforts to make Sweden join the Atlantic Alliance.

It is evident that Soviet Russia

does not want to venture on war, for if she did she would have struck before the west began to re-arm, when the going would have been easy. So the biggest risk now is that the Western Powers may say or do things likely to make the Russian Government feel that the Western Powers will take the offensive once their rearmament is completely. If the Russian Government becomes definitely convinced that such a stroke is certain to come, they will not be likely to wait for it. From that point of view there is obviously more threat in multiplying the scale of America's long-range strategic air force than in NATO's effort to build up a ground force and tactical air force for the defence of western Europe. The planned scale of this NATO force is such that it may suffice to check a Russian invasion of the west, but it is not nearly enough for an invasion of Russia. It is thus plainly defensive, not offensive, in purpose—a shield rather than a sword. An adequate covering force on the ground is a better safeguard than to depend purely on the retaliatory threat of atom-bombing. An atom-bomber is a bad policeman or frontier guard. It is uncertain of stopping an invader, while liable to be mutually fatal in ultimate effects.

But the best safeguard of all is for all of us to keep cool. Indignation and exasperation are primary risks, for such emotions are all too liable to produce a fatal explosion. Nothing can be more fatal than the feeling "it's bound to come—let's get it over". War is not a way out of danger and strain. It is a way down into a pit—of unknown depth. On the other hand, tension so intense as now is almost bound to relax eventually if war is postponed long enough. That has happened often before in history, for situations change.

TEEN AGE PROBLEM

There is too much molly-coddling of young people today. Some parents think it a disgrace to expect their children to do any honorable work, and a sin to give them direction or discipline. As most of today's teen agers are now delinquent, I suggest they all be taken out of schools and the boys put into the army at 16 years of age and the girls in institutions until they're 21.

BOYS OUTNUMBERED

As a footnote to your article, "Don't Go West, Girls!" I'd like to point out that on a recent survey conducted at Bellis High School it was found that of the total registered students only 38 per cent were boys. That means that for every boy there are 1.625 girls.

Grassland News Briefs

Mrs. Julia Stepaniuk left for Edmonton last week to attend the wedding of her cousin, Miss Helen Laver, who was united in marriage to Corporal Ropchan of the Canadian Army. On her way home she was accompanied by her sister Ann.

Professor MacKenzie of the faculty of Agriculture at the University of Alberta, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie over the weekend.

It should be noted that the Red Cross parcels sent to Grassland for the Romanyshyn family arrived the day after the fire, and were much appreciated by the family. It was estimated that the parcels contained about $200 worth of clothing, etc.

On Tuesday night a bear slaughtered four pigs belonging to Pete Swerin, who farms a few miles north of Grassland. Several nights later, Bruin returned, but met his fate, as Pete was waiting for him with his trusty rifle. The bear was a large specimen, estimated to weigh 600 lbs.

The Ben McKenzie's had their house stuccoed recently.

Seeding is general in Grassland, and the ladies are preparing to plant gardens shortly.

The students are all busy practising for the track meet usually held on May 24.

Miss Rita Derousseau of Donatville visited at the home of her uncle, Ben McKenzie, for the past week.

Mrs. Dora Eloffson of Ponoka visited her sister, Mrs. Ben McKenzie.

Fire At Plamondon Bay

PLAMONDON—Fire of unknown origin began at the mink farm of Mr. Phil Johnson. It was first noticed by Mrs. Johnson who saw smoke coming from the roof of the barn. It was thought for some time that the fire would be uncontrollable due to the very strong wind.

Mr. Owen Bigelow saw the smoke from his place across the bay and, picking up his neighbors on the way, turned in the alarm at the Plamondon telephone office.

From there on David, the operator, spread the news to the residents of the village and every available man rushed out to the Phil Johnson farm.

The barn was a total loss but due to the efforts of all, the fire was confined to a small area without any other buildings being lost. This was very fortunate indeed as, in this area, so many mink farms are close together. At the time of writing it is not known if any damage was caused to the mink.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Johnson and residents of this area wish to express their sincere thanks to all those who helped.

Let us show you how good baled hay can be

The best way to judge hay quality is to examine it in the barn this time of year. Here are some things you will notice about rolled bales:

- 1 The hay is bright and green — just like it was baled.
- 2 Leaves are sealed inside the bale — almost no leaf loss during handling.
- 3 Bales that have been rained on are still good — they shed the showers.
- 4 Rolled bales handle without waste — won't buckle, break or fall apart.
- 5 Rolled bales are easy to feed — rolled out, cut open or fed whole.

Let us show you why hay in rolled bales is winning blue ribbons for quality at leading shows. Your livestock needs the best.

LETTERS TO LOUISA

Dear Louisa,
I have two little boys and one of them looks very like my husband's people.

My problem is this: Every time
we go to my in-laws' home, they make a great deal over this little boy, and pay very little attention to the other one. I don't know what to do about this. They will ask one to spend the night with them and not the other.

What can I do to help this situation? L. B.

Answer:
I doubt if the children's grandparents realize that they are making such a difference between the children but it should be brought to their attention.

The person to do this is your husband, as your in-laws will probably pay more attention to what he says and will not resent his criticism as much as they would if it came from you.

He can go about it as tactfully
as possible and make them understand that such conduct will have a bad effect on both little boys, if the grandparents continue to show
so much partiality to one.

LOUISA.

MALE CROCHETER IN WINNIPEG WINS $100 AND CHAMPIONSHIP

By LAURIE GRAHAM

(British United Press Staff Correspondent)

WINNIPEG, Man. — (BUP) — Frank Vollett, 43-year-old Winnipeg policeman, holds a national crown for a hobby most men would shudder at the thought of tackling.

Vollett, Canada's 1951 male crochet king, says winning the title was the biggest thrill that ever happened to him. He took the crown for his eeu table-cloth
in the Canada-wide crochet contest of the Canadian Needlecraft Association at Montreal, Que.

"I never thought I would win anything like that. If I'd got an honorable mention I would have been more than satisfied," he said when informed he had won the crown and the first-place $100 prize.

Vollett started to do crochet work a year ago last winter when in hospital for five weeks and while spending four months' convalescence at home. "I needed something to occupy my time. My wife suggested I crochet and got me started at it."

The big, likeable cop, admitted
he didn't really start his crochet work for a hobby. "I started knitting at first, but gave that up because there's too many needles.
I then got started on crochet work, liked it a lot, and now it's become a hobby with me," he said.

Mrs. Vollett, who guided him through the early stages, said there just isn't any justice, and
"I've never won a contest."

She says her husband started crochet work with heavy string and after completing a doily graduated quickly to a small tablecloth, which he worked at for two months to finish.

Vollett's winning entry was his fourth tablecloth and it took him
four months to finish.

He says it costs about $15 for thread for each tablecloth. He has given three of them away to relatives and believes, considering compensation for labor, they're worth about $75 each.

The 13 year veteran of the police force and his wife, who has been crocheting for about 25 years, have a houseful of their handiwork. Nearly all the chairs and tables are decorated and the couple are now working on a few doilies and centrepieces to give to friends and relatives for Christmas.

Vollett, who plans to enter another tablecloth in the Canadian National Exhibition next year,
had a word of advice for interested males.

He says crocheting is a good,
interesting pastime. But he admits that an active man would never start it. "I wouldn't have,
if I hadn't been laid up," he said.

GOOD SEED FOR THIS YEAR

By C. A. WEIR, District Supervisor, Plant Products Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture

There are three factors that govern the desirability of any stock of seed. These are, its purity as to variety, its freedom from weed seed infestation and its ability to grow and produce healthy, vigorous plants in the field. While the first two points mentioned are highly important in this and every year, the third point assumes greater importance
than usual this year.

This season the germinating
ability of seed stocks is more uncertain than has usually been the case. Several types of damage have occurred. Much seed suffered frost damage and great quantities of crop were cut when immature and because of weather conditions never did have an opportunity to dry and "after ripen" thoroughly. Most of such material was threshed with a high moisture content and has been stored in such a manner that it has had no opportunity to dry.

Before it is ready to germinate rapidly and strongly seed should have dried in the field for a period
so that the "after ripening" process is complete. If threshed in the fall after a warm dry period and otherwise undamaged, it will usually germinate satisfactorily.

This season much seed has also suffered from frost damage. This will also lower the germination.
If the frost damage was severe it may have destroyed the germination completely.

Tough or damp grain usually will not germinate satisfactorily
until it has been dried in fairly warm temperature.

Some helpful measures may be taken by the grower to improve the condition of tough seed prior to planting. Not enough is known about artificial drying of seed to make recommendations except to say that if such a method is followed the seed should be dried slowly at temperatures not much above those of a hot summer's day.

Movement of the seed will help to some extent. To shovel it over on a mild day, and to spread it moderately thinly in a dry granary will help reduce the moisture content and likely help to break
the dormancy that damp or tough seed has.

See that is very damp, or that has been heavily frozen will probably not be satisfactory at all.

This is one of my most embarrassing moments:

One summer I was staying at my Grandmother's in Glenevis. A man came in the door who looked just like a boy I knew. I said,
"Hello, Johnny." Was I ever embarrassed when he said, "Sorry,
I'm not Johnny, but I'm his brother."

An embarrassing moment:

One night my two boy friends and I went to church. While the minister was making a speech on God I laughed out as my boy friends were trying to make me.
I was very embarrassed when the minister and the whole church group stared at me.

Chickens Increase

The number of chickens in Alberta increased during 1951 to 5,780,000, an increase of 577,000 from the 1950 total. The number of laying hens decreased from 3,345,000 in 1950 to 3,250,000 in 1951.

Turkeys increased from 386,000
to 500,000 in 1951; geese from 56,000 to 77,000, and ducks from 32,000 to 56,000.

If planted it is unlikely to produce a good field stand.

The logical procedure is to test
each lot of seed for germination, and if the results are below 75
per cent to endeavor to secure a better stock.

When in the city shop around the corner and save.

DREW WON'T HELP PARTY IN PROVINCIAL BATTLE

OTTAWA — If there are any Alberta Tories who hope Tory leader George Drew will sparkplug their fight for them in the next provincial election, they can just forget it. Mr. Drew just won't be available for any provincial battles.

The national Progressive Conservative leader made this abundantly clear recently to provincial P.C.'s in British Columbia. What applies to B.C. applies to the rest.

WARNED B.C.

Mr. Drew has categorically told the Pacific coast group he'll have no part of its campaign in the provincial election there this June. They had been in Ottawa recently for the Progressive Conservative National Association meeting. They begged Mr. Drew to take an active part for them in the B.C. battle. He turned their requests down flat.

The official reason given by Mr. Drew was that, as a national leader who has championed the rights of the province for the past 10 years, he cannot now take an active part in provincial election campaigns.

But there are supposed to be other reasons which no one close to Mr. Drew would disclose.

Alberta this time "to serve as a sound alternative" to Premier Manning's Social Credit Government.

Alberta P.C.'s here claim that the provincial Alberta Liberals have gone much farther to the "left" than have the national Liberal party, and are giving the CCF a run for their money when it comes to Socialistic ideas.

This means, they add, that the Alberta voter has no choice at the polls should they want to choose a free-enterprise party other than Social Credit to rule the province.

"We are going to provide the sound alternative to Manning's Government in Alberta," they say, "an alternative which has been thrown overboard by the Liberals."

Even if all the planned Progressive Conservative candidates were elected, they would not have a majority in the Alberta Legislature.

And so far as the national leader is concerned, what applies to B.C. applies equally well to the Alberta P.C.'s and their coming electoral battle expected some time this summer.

The Progressive Conservatives didn't take part in the last provincial election in Alberta in 1948. They put up no candidates. This time, however, they are expected to put up close to two dozen candidates. There are 57 seats at stake.

They are re-entering the provincial sphere of politics in

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DOG!

By SYLVIA WOYWITKA

A feud has developed on the farm of Wm. Woywitka between the family dog and the turkey gobbler. and many times it has been seen that the dog deliberately goes out of his way in order to avoid meeting up with the red-headed tyrant.

It started off innocently enough. The dog was soaking up the May sun on the south side of the barn while the romantically inclined turkey was strutting around before his admiring girl friends. Just as he was goose-stepping and blowing off steam, he accidentally stepped on the sleeping dog.

The dog, awakened so rudely from his sleep, got the impression that he was being attacked. Jumping up, he snapped at the gobbler's breast and came up with a mouthful of feathers.

That was the climax! The male of the species resented being mauled while the turkey harem watched. He immediately hit back with a vicious peck at the dog and came up with a mouth of fur.

In no time at all, feathers and fur were flying around that part of the yard. This continued until the dog caught the turkey by the neck and began dragging him around and in doing so he was showing him who was who. This struggle necessitated a member of the family to step in and break it up.

As yet, the feud continues. The turkey's breast is minus feathers
